Hindenberg Has Brought Up Great Masses of Troops and Is Making Third Desperate Effort to Cut Through Russian Lines—On One Six-Mile Front He Poured 84,000 Men and 100 Batteries of Artillery—Losses Are Terrible—Petrograd Claims Attacks Were Repulsed—Fighting Almost as Bad in Carpathians—England Stirred to the Depths Over Germany's Announcement to Neutral Vessels—Fighting in the East Said to be Fiercest Since the Russian Invasion by Napoleon. Austria Resumes War on Servia.

(By Associated Press.)

London, Feb. 5.—One of the most furious battles of the war is at its height in front of Warsaw. Hindenberg has brought up great masses of troops there in the third desperate attempt to batter through the Russian lines in attacks on the center near the village of Borjow.

The official statements say nothing about the losses, which must be enormous.

The Russian official statement says in a section of the front six miles long the Germans brought up no less than eighty-four thousand men with one hundred batteries of artillery. In compact masses the troops were hurled against the Russians for several days. Petrograd claims these attacks were repulsed. That the Russians then assumed the offensive and captured some German trenches and two villages.

Fighting in the Carpathians is hard, but less severe.

ENGLAND STIRRED TO THE CORE.

(By Associated Press.)

London, Feb. 5.—England was stirred today as seldom ever before by the German announcement, warning neutrals to keep out of British waters after February 18. It was announced unofficially the British government is considering whether or not to try to stop all ship communication with Germany in retaliation.

FIGHTING FIERCEST

SINCE NAPOLEON

(By Associated Press.)

Petrograd, Feb. 5.—The Russians say the fighting at Borjow is the most terrible since Napoleon's invasion. In an open plain six miles wide, about two hundred thousand men are fighting. They are packed so closely the cannon can no longer be used. Whole companies are exterminated. The Germans are attacking in ten or twelve lines like the waves of the sea.

Austria Resumes War on Servia.

(By Associated Press.)

Geneva, Feb. 5.—Austria has resumed hostilities against Servia, according to a well informed source here.

Germany Sends Reinforcements.

(By Associated Press.)

Venice, Feb. 5.—A Vienna dispatch reports the arrival in the Carpathians of thirty thousand German troops to assist the Hungarians, who were threatened with envelopment by the Russians.

The report that two hundred thousand Germans are en route to Poland to attempt to relieve Przemyśl is confirmed.

Will Not Affect Sailings.

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Feb. 5.—Steamship men said today they do not expect transatlantic sailings will be affected by the German announcement last night

The waste in groceries of inferior, or even secondary quality, makes them expensive to you, no matter how little you pay for them.

If a certain portion is bad—unfit for use, it is a dead loss—a barrel of specked apples or potatoes is a fair sample.

There is Nothing Dry About

MR. MORROW'S ADDRESS TONIGHT

Though he will tell you about the dry times ahead. He will open your eyes to the facts regarding the rapid spread of Prohibition; he will tell you how State after State is coming into the knowledge of the freedom from the whiskey traffic. He will also be able to tell you of the great blessings that have come to Russia since the Czar, in his wisdom, has forbidden the manufacture and sale of "Vodka" in that great country.

Few people understand the magnitude of the Prohibition campaign that is being fought in this country today. A fund of $1,000,000 has already been pledged to establish ten great Prohibition newspapers, covering the entire Nation. National Prohibition is soon to be an assured fact.

Let Mr. Morrow tell you about it at the Methodist Church tonight
